If this second He will slip back into his hole and double up like a summer coon and sleep for six The correct name of the groundhog is said to be Woodchuck. He is found in North America from Baffin's Bay clear down to the Carolinas. Some travelers faim that he is also a resident of South Africa, but the Africans do not have a oundhog day. His weather prognosticating ability was discovered by the farmers down in Pennsylvania, This is a bit of information not to be found in the dictionaries and the encyclopedias because the writers of those books do not know who did discover that the groundhog knows a thing or two about the weather. They simply call it a superstition, and say that it originated among the country people,

There are some people who think that the groundhog is a rank fake because he has been known to come out of his hole on the second of February when it rained all day and he was unable to see his shadow, and then the very next day had to skip back to his hole to keep from freezing to death. That is no sign that the groundher is not a prophet entitled to honor even in his own country. As proof of that proposition it may be mentioned that Professor Todd of the local weather office has been known to make wrong guesses about the weather

There is no getting around the fact that the ground hog is a scientific weather prophet and he will be doing business at the old stand when all of his traducers now living are dead and forgotten. Unheralded Adventures

Of Sherlock Holmes. We were smoking our cheroots after supper at Dennett's, when Sherlock Holmes, who had carelessly picked up a copy of the New York Dramatic Mirror, clutched me by the arm.

"Look, Watson," he cried, mysteriously, "Read that."

Picking up the paper and starting where his long, lean finger indicated, I read the following advertisement:

WANTED-Actor for lead. Also good looking, heavy. Soubrette or ingenue with good specialty. Union carpenter that can play parts. Other useful people, write quick, THEATRICAL, Park House, Pavonia avenue, Jersey City. Puzzled, I turned to Holmes.

What does it mean?" I asked, "Why do the cars cross Baltimor street," he asked with a tenacity and the imperturability of a mad turtle,

"Is it a lead-pipe cinch?" I ventured. Sherlock Holmes bound to his feet in his excitement.

I think that the great majority of boys have the hunting instinct born in them. I am satisfied that I had, for I distinct remember when I was only six months old I would take crying spells that would last for hours, and the only thing that would pacify me was for my mother to take the gun in the back yard and shoot it off, when I would almost instantly fall asleep and slumber by the hour with my face wreathed in smiles. Between the ages of six and twelve months my father spent much money for ammunition to keep me quiet. At the end of the first year, when the north side of the wood dawned upon him that the shot in the charge was unnecessary, and the gun was discarded and my mother's slipper was substituted; the report was almost as loud, but not so pleasant.
